

THE SYMBIOTIC NETWORK

The Art of Giving Back and Multiplying Through Connection

Companion Workbook to The Tree of the Earth

The Invisible Monastery

How to Use This Workbook

The mycelial network does not ask for permission to exchange nutrients. It simply does. This workbook installs the same logic into your life and work. The 10% rule is not a suggestion. It is the minimum viable act that keeps the web alive and feeding you in return.

Section One: Mapping Your Current Web

Prompt 1: Who are the five people or entities that most directly feed your work right now (clients, collaborators, mentors, platforms, communities)?

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____
4. _____
5. _____

Prompt 2: For each, what are you currently giving back? Be honest. Is it equal, more, or less than what you receive?

Prompt 3: Where is the exchange thin or one-sided? That is where the network is vulnerable.

Section Two: The 10% Practice

Ten percent is the floor, not the ceiling. It can be money, time, attention, introductions, knowledge, or opportunity. The form does not matter. The circulation does.

This Week's Symbiotic Act

What ten percent will I give back to my network this week?

To whom: _____

What form (money / time / introduction / knowledge / other): _____

Expected return to the web (not to me): _____

Vow of the Symbiotic Network

I vow to stop extracting from my relationships and start circulating through them. I will perform at least one symbiotic act every week — giving ten percent or more back to the connections that sustain me — without keeping score. I trust the physics of the web. What I give returns multiplied.

Signature: _____ Date: _____

Section Three: Weekly Network Tending

Use this page every Sunday evening.

Who did I feed this week? _____

Who fed me? _____

Where did I operate from crab mentality instead of tree logic?

One adjustment I will make next week to strengthen the web:

The Invisible Monastery | Symbiotic Network Workbook