How to Use This Workbook

This workbook is not for passive reading. It is for installation. Each prompt is designed to move Dual Self Union from concept into your actual operating system. Use a dedicated journal alongside this. Write without editing yourself. The shadow does not need your performance — only your honesty.

Complete one section per day or per week. Do not rush. Union is not a single breakthrough. It is repeated welcome.

Section One: Naming the Shadow

There is a version of you that believes it is inadequate, unworthy, or incapable of holding what you desire. Until it is named plainly, it cannot be met — and until it is met, it will keep casting its vote from the dark.

Prompt 1: In what three areas of your life does the inadequate self show up loudest right now?

Name them plainly. No performance. Just the truth.

Prompt 2: For each area, how active is the veto right now, on a scale of 1-10?

Be ruthless.

Prompt 3: What does this part of you say, in its own words, when no one is listening?

Section Two: The Veto Audit

A veto rarely announces itself through confrontation. It works through quiet withdrawal — the follow-up not sent, the opportunity left to go cold, the retreat dressed up as a reasonable excuse.

Prompt 4: Name three recent moments where you shrank, withdrew, or quietly sabotaged something that was working.

Prompt 5: For each one, what reasonable-sounding excuse did the veto hide behind?

Prompt 6: If you were completely unwilling to sabotage yourself again this week, what would you do differently?

Section Three: Daily Union Practice

Install this as a non-negotiable practice. Two to three minutes. Sit with the version of you that has done everything wrong. Do not argue with it. See it fully. Speak: I see you. I accept you. You are mine. You deserve everything that is rightfully yours.

Day 1

What showed up? Was it met with acceptance or old resistance?

Day 2

Day 3

Continue this practice daily for 21 days. Use your journal once this page is full.

Then review. The veto will already be quieter.

The Vow of the Dual Self

I vow to stop exiling the parts of myself that still believe they are unworthy. I will meet the shadow with acceptance, compassion, gratitude, love, and peace — never with war. I will call it home, again and again, until there is only one self left to claim what is rightfully mine.
